

TotalCare Wellness Packages: Adult Dogs

There is much variation in the environment and lifestyle of pet dogs. Houses with private yards or apartment complexes, walks in secluded neighborhoods or visits to dog parks, use of kennels or out-of-town travel, and the presence of other household pets all play a role in your dog's health maintenance needs. In addition, human health concerns must be considered, especially relating to exposure to children. The age and breed of a dog is also very important in evaluating protocols to provide high quality care. We will assess your pet's individually to help you select the package that best meets your needs.

All dogs should receive health maintenance services once or twice a year. Most important in their care is the physical examination, a critical assessment of wellness or early medical problems. Laboratory testing such as fecal examinations and blood parasite tests are extremely important in parasite detection and control. Routine screening of blood and urine, especially in middle-aged and older dogs, can be life-saving in the early detection of disease. Finally, vaccinations are a safe and effective method to prevent serious contagious disease. Rabies vaccinations are required by law - after an initial 1 year vaccine at 3 months of age, adult dogs must receive a Rabies vaccine every 3 years. The Distemper-Parvo-Corona (7 in 1) and Bordetella vaccines are standard and recommended for all dogs. Vaccines are also available for Canine Influenza and Lyme Disease, a serious tick-borne disease.

Wellness packages vary by addition of elective vaccines and laboratory testing. Basic, Standard, and Optimum packages are available - see below for a thorough explanation.
